THE Blue Book containing the Papers cor nected with the Development of Trade tween British Burmah and Western China and with the Mission to Yunnan of 1874-75 which has lately come to hand, contains a mass of information, but little that is not already known to the public. The Mission to Yunnan originated, as most of our readers: are probably aware, with the Indian Government, acting on representations from the mershants of British Burmab, and supported depressed state. Freights have reached the by the statements of the Political Agents at both for steamers and sailers from Saigon to Mandalay and Bhamo. Captain RICHARD Hongkong. From this it is pretty obvious that Sir Thomas Wape had no favourable opinion of the scheme for opening up the projected route. He was, bowever, probably as much inclined to take a gloomy view of the question as Captain

SPRYE was disposed to regard it through a rose-coloured medium. There is a probability of a good and remunerative trade springing up along the suggested route, but it will not be the work of a day, neither is it likely to count in proportions the trade Deckyard, accountant at the Dockyard

The State does not wish to provide pensions or the element of indescribable rift raff, wasters, gaol-birds, and gutter-wash so often found on board merchant ships; nor does she want to provide nensions for the 10 per cent, of foreigners in the British Mercantile Marine, If she does not wish to do this, it would be nothing short of roubery to appropriate a certain percentage of their wages as a contribution to ruided by the dictates of sound common sense is to provide pensions for just so much and no Highness made a complimentary allusion to more of that respectable, honest, trustworthy, national, patriotio, British element in the Mercantile Marine that will train itself for State service, and thoroby render itself of use in case of emorgency to the State. This is completely and finally done in the Royal Naval Reserve by payment of retainers and pensions. Let de hope that we may hear no more about pension fund for merchant sailors as a body : but let us extend out Royal Naval Reserve, thereby adding to the strength and prosperity of the Empire by previding training and pensions for the able and the worthy amongst the class of Mercaptile Suiter Jack, instead of wasting money by bestowing indiscriminately pensions on every person who chooses to follow the sea as a service, but, who, in doing so, works as other labourers for himself, without baying the patriotism to join our second line of defence the Royal Naval Reserve. - Nautical Magazine.

THE MISSING LINK

gentlemin, by name Targer Helm, has found something which, if we may believe the tale he talls, would seem to supply the "missing link." The primary object of Mr. Helm's search appears to have been, according to the San Diego mion, some quartz lead. To obtain this desirable treasure, and perhaps take home samples for the inspection of European investors, the enterprising traveller was wandering in the mountains ten miles oast of Warner's Ranche. when he "suddenly heard somebody whistle." Looking up, he saw tomething sitting on a large boulder twenty paces from him, "and supposing it to be a wild animal," he "immediately came down on it with his needle-gun." By the expression "cure down on it." we are led to suppose, however, that Mr. Helm simply cointed at the apparition, for we learn that the phiest at once rose to his feet, stepped forward, and disclosed the form and features of a man. Mr. Dirwin and his brithren will be interested to know that the gentleman who thus moved towards the needle gun seemed to be "covered all iver with goarse black bair, two or three inches ong, like that of a bear," and that "he was not at all like an Indian, but was more like an American or a Spaniard." Sad to relate, Mr. Meim at this moment lost his presence of mind, and without more ado, the Wild Man of the Mountains made his pscape. The Veddahs of Ceylon are interesting in many ways, but what

A letter from Alexandria in the Prosse says that rever has a pilgrimage to Mecca and Medina been so numerously attended as the one which was concluded at the beginning of the present year. There is now at Mecca hoclerated preacher whose reputation has extended through the whole of Arabia. He is regarded as a saint and a prophet, and people from furkey, Northern Africa, the Soudan, Arabia, and India assembled in crowds to listen to him. Among the pilgrims were several princes, such as the profe of the Shah of Persia and some Arabian and African Sultans. All strictly fulfilled the rules observed by the pilgrims; and even the Shah's uncle, who is a man advanced in years, entered Meons with only a cloth round his loins. As old man of seventy, feeling his end approaching, travelled all the way from Kurrachee to hear the celebrated prophet, and lied at Menca shortly after his arrival. The correspondent also describes some sermons which were addressed to the assembled pilgrims, apparently with considerable effect. In one the preacher urged his hearers to have as little intercourse as possible with Christians, and to abstain entirely from drinking wine, and bis It was proposed by Mr. Bengalli, and words produced so much remorse in some of the pilgrims that as he rode away they threw themelves under his horse's hoofs. Another " saint " predicted that within the next ten years the whole of " Frangistan" (Europe) would be under the rule of the crescent, that the Sultan at Constantinople would conquer the eastern portion of the Continent, including "Rumi-el-Kubrieh." The programme of the Trionnial Musical Featival, which is to be held in the Birmingham Town Hall in the autumn, is now definitively arranged. On the first day Mendelssohn's "Elijah " will occupy the morning, and in the evening Mr. Cowen's cantula, "The Corenia," will be performed, followed by a miscellaneoni selection. On the second day Professor Macfarren's new oratorio, "The Resurrection," specially composed for the festival, will be heard for the first time at the morning performance, and in the evening another of the novelties, the sucred cantata "Zion," composed at the request of the committee, by Niels Gade, of Copenbugen, will be given, followed by a miscellaneous selection. On the third day the "Messiah" will occupy the molning; and a cantata and miscellaneous selection the evening. For the fourth and last day " The Last Judge ment" of Spohr, "The Last Supper" by Wagner, and Beethoven's First Mass (in O), are promised, and the festival will conclude, as it began, with one of Mendelssohn's oratorios, "Bt. THE DEAD TO THE LIVING. Freiligrath's poom, "The Drad to the Living," was partly translated at the time of its publication, and published in England and the United States, but neither in the moter of the original nor with a clear presentation of its political references. As the most noted of his-political lyrics, with even a historical importance apringing from the trial to which it gave rise, a careful translation, made at the author's request, and bitherto unpublished, may now be of interest to many of our readers. "The Lead" are citizens of Berlin, who fell in conflict with the troops in March, 1848, and whose budies were carried on planks to the Royal Palace, where Frederick William IV. was compelled by the people to come forth and do them the last honour. The only other point which needs explanation is that the Arch-Duke John, of Austria, was elected Regent of the German Empire by the Parliament which convenced at Frankfort in the Summer of 1848.

Shot thre' the breast the ferebeads cleft from sabre-outs So lifted up and borne aloft, on bloody planks you held us, Damb shapes of pain, with outery wild, you held that he might view us.
